

Kenneth J. Rotondo, DVM, MBA

Dr. Rotondo has practiced companion animal veterinary medicine in the Capital Region of New York State for 29 years. He is presently a principal in Provident Development Group located in Clifton Park, NY. Dr. Rotondo has served on numerous boards within local, state and national veterinary organizations. He served on the Advisory Council to the Veterinary College at Cornell University. In 1990 Dr. Rotondo was elected President of the New York State Veterinary Medical Society during its centennial year. In 1992 Dr. Rotondo was recognized as the New York State Veterinarian of the Year. He presently is the New York State Alternate Delegate to the AVMA.

Dr. Rotondo holds a DVM degree from Cornell University and an MBA from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

In addition to veterinary practice management Dr. Rotondo is affiliated with the Capital Consulting Group, llc, a change management consulting firm whose clients include Fortune 500 Companies, various Department of Defense Elements and Agencies, Communities, and a wide variety of small and medium sized businesses.

Recognized as an expert in practice management and the dynamics associated with successful practices, he lectures extensively throughout the United States, Canada, and the Europe. He lectures annually to third and fourth year veterinary students at Cornell University. He most recently has concluded a national lecture series for Novartis in both the United States, Canada and Great Britain, was featured in the Fastrack Lecture Series at the AVMA Convention, Spoke at the North American Veterinary Hospital Managers Association National Convention and at the North American Veterinary Conference in Orlando.

He and his wife Jill, reside in Saratoga Springs, New York.